tion in which the traditions of self government resides will retain its ascendancy long enough to complete the training of the other races. A policy of industrial exclusion would scarcely be practicable or consistent with humanity; but it is time for the Republic to refuse to be made a dumping ground for European pauperism, and to provide, if it be possible, that the naturalization law be strictly enforced.

By the dismissal of Irish workmen from English works, in consequence of the dynamite outrages, attention has been called to the fact that multitudes of Irish are domiciled in all the great cities of England, and are eating the bread of the country which they are vilifying and conspiring to destroy. It must surely be deemed strange that, if the English people have behaved like cruel and insolent tyrants to the Irish, all these Irish should have chosen to take up their abode in Great Britain. What would have become of them if England had not offered them subsistence? Their own island could not have maintained them, and their fate would have been what that of the French Canadians would be if their rapidly growing population were shut up in Quebec. The Irish will now be made aware that, if boycotting and expulsion are to be the order of the day, they may not be the only sufferers by that game. It is deplorable, we are told, that the crime of the dynamiters should thus be visited on innocent workmen. It is deplorable, most deplorable, that hatred shall thus be stirred up between two races which are inseparably intermixed with each other and inevitably destined to live under the same roof. But on whom does the blame rest? Nor, if the Irish in England generally are innocent of the dynamite outrages, are they innocent of offence against the English people. They have on the contrary exhibited their hostility in the most irritating and insulting manner; they have broken in upon public meetings; they have held meetings of their own to pour abuse upon England and parade sympathy with her enemies; and they are notoriously preparing to use the British franchise in aid of a conspiracy for the dismemberment and ruin of the realm. Would any other nation be willing to cherish its avowed enemies in its bosom? How would the Americans have treated open sympathy with rebellion in the time of their civil war? How did they treat the Irish when the Irish rose in favor of the South?

A Detroit paper, speaking of the recent visit of the licensed victuallers to Ottawa, says that "as the National Policy is almost played out, Sir John will espouse the temperance cause and go to the country on the prohibition issue." The fact that the paper quoted is a rabid free trader fully accounts for its lunacy in respect of the National Policy. The other statement may be equally correct.

Owing to the great difficulty, expense and uncertainty of getting supplies and provisions to the distant district of McKenzie river, the Hudson's Bay Company have decided to build a steamer at Fort Smith, on the Slave river, to ply between that point and Fort Simpson, on the McKenzie. For several years past it has been almost impossible to procure a sufficient number of Indians at Fort Simpson for crews, thus the company were unable to send as many boats as they otherwise would have done. The quantity of provisions brought to was therefore much less than it ought to have been, and frequent danger of starvation has been the consequence at most of the posts throughout the district.

We clip the following from the Ottawa Citizen:

THE RIGHT MAN IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

Mr. John Tomkins, Indian farm instructor at Duck Lake and brother of Mr. Henry Tomkins of Nanotik, has been enjoying a two months leave of absence in visiting his friends in Ottawa and vicinity, and arranging some of his business details. It is now some six years since he left Ottawa, and his experiences during that time have been in many cases most amusing. He speaks in high terms of the progress his Indians are making, and if his account needed any verification it can be found in the annual report of the Department of Indian Affairs. There we find his work set out in glowing terms by Mr. Rae, the Agent, and Mr. Wadsworth, the Superintendent. His farm is reported by these gentlemen to be in a highly prosperous state of cultivation. This gratifying state of affairs being the result of the labor of the Indians, who have been well drilled by their painstaking instructor, and many of them are especially expert in the art of ploughing. Altogether Mr. Tomkins may well be proud of the success of his work, which is a noble and philanthropic one—to tame and reduce to the ways of civilization, and consequent industry, our red brother. He seems to have a happy knack of ruling the Indian strictly and yet exciting no ill-feeling among them. In past time they have tried to practice on him some of their proverbial cunning, but they have found it to be diamond cut diamond, and now Hardy and Okemans, his chiefs, are as docile as possible. We do not know how many of Mr. Tomkins' fellow instructors possess his talent, but we can safely congratulate the head of the Department of Indian Affairs on his appointment, as he is one of those who does, whatever he does, with his might. Therefore though fitted for a higher sphere, Mr. Tomkins has given ample proof of his being the right man in the right place.

GENERAL NEWS. THE DYNAMITERS.

LONDON, March 1.—Saturday was a day of great excitement and nervous tension in London. It was known that a meeting of the Fenian Council would be held at 2 p.m. in the streets in the Westminster district. The crowd thronged with people soon. The crowd watched the entrance to the Premier's official residence and greeted the arrival of each Cabinet member with cheers or hisses as the fancy of the moment prompted. The Right Hon. Jos. Chamberlain, President of the Board of Trade, was received with an outburst of the most intense hisses and cheers. Lord Hartington, Secretary of State, was also subjected to the same treatment. The howling of the mob.

IRELAND AGAIN INSULTED.
A mass meeting of the Irish Nationalists was held this afternoon in a portion of the Phoenix Park known as the Nine Acres. To protest against the action of the Speaker of the House of Commons in excluding O'Brien, the Editor of the Irish Land and Member of Parliament for Malinbeg, Lord Mayor O'Connor presided. Fully 10,000 people were present. Fiery speeches were made, and resolutions were adopted declaring the Speaker's action as insult to Ireland, and demanding the prompt reinstatement of O'Brien.

QUEEN, GORRONS IMMORTALIZED.
Queen Victoria has ordered Bagnall, the sculptor, to make a bust of General Gordon.

INSPECTING THE ARMY.
The Government has ordered a medical inspection of every regiment in the army to make a correct estimate of the men in each command actually fit for active service.

AUSLIEDER COLOONISTS.
ADELAIDE, March 1.—The colonists of South Australia are generally agitated at the answer made by Earl Derby to their communication in which they offered to send troops to the Sudan, and fail to perceive a satisfactory reason why preference has been shown the people of New South Wales, whose offer of assistance was accepted by the Home Government.

RECRUITING ABROAD.
BRISBANE, March 2.—The police of Strathmore have discovered a number of English recruiting officers in civilian dress alleged to be secretly enlisting men for service in the British Army. General Duffield, the Governor of Alsace and Lorraine, has issued orders to prevent such enlistments in future, and the recruiting agents have been warned that unless they desist they will be liable to summary arrest.

WAR NOTES

LONDON, March 2.—Admiral von Darnitz announces that reports are current there to the effect that a proposal has been made to organize a contingent of 5,000 Zulus for service in the Sudan.

India has been ordered to send 3,000 additional camels to the Sudan, England defraying expenses.

According to advices from Massowah the garrison of Kavalah is reduced to an effective force of 600 men. The town is closely besieged and the garrison is short of ammunition. The Egyptian troops are discontented. The Government at Cairo has abandoned all hope of relieving the town. The destination of the Fourth Italian expedition to the Red Sea is supposed to be Trinkitat.

The Government has chartered seven light vessels for transporting troops and supplies to Suakin.

Despatches from Korti state that Gen. Wolsley's eyes have become affected by the glare of the sun. The intense heat has caused an outbreak of typhoid fever among the British troops.

KORTI, March 3.—Gen Wolsley has ordered Gen. Blackeburn to return to Korti forthwith and not to proceed on his march to Abu Hamel. The Mufti suspects the Vakeel of Darghet of plotting to pursue and attack the rebels. Zarah Bey is organizing a native force for the purpose of dispersing marauders between Hoveiyatt and Gaskdul Wells.

BURMA, March 4.—The last of the Indian contingent sailed for Suakin today.

SUAKIN, March 2.—After the late action of the rebels in destroying the advance reinforcements. Asquith went to them to alter the arrangement for expelling the natives. While examining one of the mines it exploded, and Asquith was blown to pieces.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The story from Buffalo that Fenians contemplate another raid on Canada has created a good deal of talk in Irish revolutionary circles. "The main point of the despatch is true," said Marshall John Beach, a member of the Joseph Brady Circle of the Fenian Brotherhood. "Ever since we heard of the proposition to send a contingent from Canada to the Sudan we have been devising the best means of striking a blow at Canada, which is a part of England's empire, and if Canadian soldiers go to the Sudan in one week's time from their departure 10,000 Irishmen, armed with all the resources of civilization, will make things lively in Toronto, Quebec and Montreal. It is our business to jab at England at all times and places. If we can't send men to help El Mahdi we will stop England from sending Canadians to help her cut-throats in Africa."

A prominent Fenian, and an ex-officer of the Irish Confederation of America, said: "I know it is a fact that 5,000 Irishmen in Chicago have pledged themselves to go to Canada at one day's notice if a Canadian regiment is sent out to fight our friend El Mahdi, and we can get at least half that number in New York. We don't intend to compromise the American Government in this matter."

William J. Burke, a member of the "A. R. L." declared: "We can get 15,000 Irishmen from all parts of the country to go into this scheme, and if we do it won't be like the Fenian raids of 1866 and 1870. Dynamite wasn't known then."

P. I. Ford of the O'Donnell Emergency Club said: "The statement of our organization is that El Mahdi's fight is Ireland's fight, and that if we can't help him we want allow the Canadians to help his enemy. Fifty members of our Club promised to go to Canada if called upon."

N. D. Rohan of the Fenian Brotherhood informed the reporter that he had official information on the subject, but he thought "that if the Canadian hirelings of England attempted to start off on an expedition of murder and plunder the Irishmen in this country would see to it that these Canadians did not leave Canada."

A FIERY PRIEST.

New York, March 1.—Patrick M. Hogan, Thomas J. Byrne and twenty-six other Irishmen, lately wrote Father C. F. O'Leary of De Soto, Mo., suggesting that he appeal to the Irishmen of America for funds to urge war against England for Ireland's freedom. Father O'Leary replies by issuing an address, in which he asks his countrymen:—

"Will you treat peacefully with that traditional enemy of our race, and, through a false cowardly sentiment, be gotten of fear, refuse to make use of that means which will surely bring about that long-sought-for consummation—the entire destruction of the hell-born power which has been for ages the disgrace of a civilized world?"

Father O'Leary goes on to say that all that is lacking to bring about England's downfall is money, and he offers to act as custodian of contributions "toward the accomplishment of Ireland's freedom by means which you and I believe to be adequate and which Irish courage will render efficient at any hazard." The means referred to are described in the letter to Father O'Leary as "such weapons as science can suggest, ingenuity devise, and devoted courage accomplish."

ANOTHER SCARE.

LONDON, March 1.—During the most exciting period of the debate in the House of Commons on Sir Stafford Northcote's resolution of censure, a loud report of an explosion rang through the Parliament buildings. The explosion occurred under the ground immediately in front of the Speaker's House, and was forcible enough to upheave and scatter the sidewalk. An investigation showed that there had been a leak in the gas main, and that the escaping gas had percolated to the surface. It had then been set on fire in some accidental way, and the flame had been communicated to the gas in the main, causing the explosion. No one was hurt, and the accident would have been a trifle but for its effect on the House of Commons. After the scare had subsided the debate on the motion of censure was renewed, and it was noticed that the speakers were more savage and vindictive during the latter part of the evening than they had been before the explosion occurred.

CENSUREL SCENES IN THE HOUSE.

The scenes in both Houses of Parliament during the evening were remarkable, and were enough to prove that the political excitement was at fever heat. Many valetudiniaries in each House, who had not been seen in their places for months, had themselves brought in carriages and wheeled to their seats in invalid chairs. Others came on crutches, and after being assisted to their places by their servants, had their crutches taken to the lobby, where the servants kept them in readiness for their master's use in case of a division. The lobby looked like the ante-room of an infirmary. Sir Watkins Williams Wynn had to be conveyed on a patent stretcher to cast his vote on the Conservative side.
